In her latest collection of poems, Banana Palace, Dana Levin takes us on a surreal and evocative journey through time, memory, and loss. The poems in this collection are both haunting and beautiful, and they offer a unique perspective on the human experience.

Levin's poems are often characterized by their use of vivid imagery and unexpected juxtapositions. In "The Museum of Broken Relationships," for example, she writes:

I have come to the museum of broken relationships to see what is left of

Through these unexpected juxtapositions, Levin invites us to consider the different ways in which we experience loss. The museum of broken relationships is a place where we can both mourn our losses and celebrate the memories of those we have loved.

In addition to their use of vivid imagery, Levin's poems are also notable for their exploration of time and memory. In "The Book of Hours," she writes:

I have been reading the book of hours and I have come to the hour of loss

Levin's poems remind us that time is both a healer and a thief. It can both help us to forget our losses and make them more painful. But it can also help us to appreciate the preciousness of life and the importance of cherishing the moments we have.

Banana Palace is a powerful and moving collection of poems that explores the human experience in all its complexity. Levin's poems are both haunting and beautiful, and they offer a unique perspective on the human experience. This is a collection that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
