Martin Gardner (1914-2010) was a prolific writer, mathematician, and magician who wrote several books of poetry. His poems are often playful and humorous, and they often explore mathematical and scientific concepts. Some of his best-remembered poems include:

- The No-Sided Professor
- The Wreck of the Titanic
- The Second Coming of Christ

The No-Sided Professor

The No-Sided Professor is a poem about a professor who has no sides. He is "a sphere with no surface, a cube with no edges, a tetrahedron with no vertices." The professor is able to pass through walls and other objects, and he can see into the future and the past.

The poem is a meditation on the nature of reality. It asks us to question what we think we know about the world, and it suggests that there may be more to reality than we can see.

The Wreck of the Titanic

The Wreck of the Titanic is a poem about the sinking of the RMS Titanic in 1912. The poem describes the ship's final hours, from the moment it hit the iceberg to the moment it sank beneath the waves.

The poem is a powerful and moving tribute to the victims of the Titanic disaster. It captures the horror and chaos of that night, and it reminds us of the fragility of life.

The Second Coming of Christ

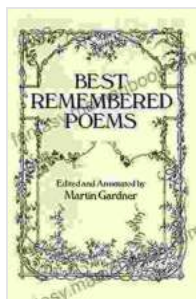

The Second Coming of Christ is a poem about the return of Jesus Christ to Earth. The poem describes the events leading up to Christ's return, and it speculates on what will happen when he arrives.

The poem is a complex and challenging work, but it is also a beautiful and inspiring one. It offers a vision of hope for the future, and it reminds us that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope.

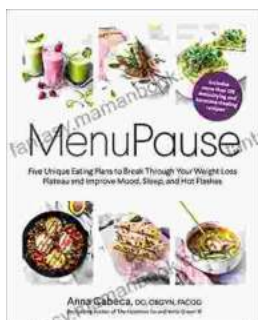

Martin Gardner was a gifted poet who wrote some of the most memorable poems of the 20th century. His poems are often playful and humorous, but they also explore deep and important themes. They are a valuable addition to the canon of American literature, and they continue to be enjoyed by readers of all ages.
