In the aftermath of the 2020 election, Donald Trump and his allies embarked on a campaign to overturn the results. They spread baseless claims of voter fraud, pressured state officials to change the outcome, and ultimately incited a mob to attack the U.S. Capitol on January 6, 2021.

The attempt to overturn the election was a grave threat to American democracy. But it was also a moment of heroism and resilience, as people across the country stood up to Trump and his allies.

This article chronicles the attempt to overturn the 2020 election and the people who stopped it. It is a story of courage, determination, and the triumph of democracy.

The Big Lie

The foundation of Trump's attempt to overturn the election was a lie: the claim that the election had been stolen from him through widespread voter fraud.

There was no evidence to support this claim. In fact, dozens of lawsuits filed by Trump and his allies were dismissed by courts, and multiple recounts and audits confirmed Biden's victory.

But Trump and his allies continued to repeat the lie, and it quickly became a mantra for his supporters. They held rallies, spread disinformation on social media, and even threatened violence against election officials.

The Pressure Campaign

As the lie of voter fraud spread, Trump and his allies began to pressure state officials to change the outcome of the election.

They made phone calls, sent letters, and even threatened violence. They urged state legislatures to overturn the results, and they asked governors to appoint electors who would vote for Trump.

Many state officials resisted this pressure. They refused to overturn the results of the election, and they appointed electors who would vote for Biden.

But some state officials caved to the pressure. In Georgia, for example, the governor appointed electors who would vote for Trump, even though Biden had won the state.

The January 6th Attack

On January 6, 2021, a mob of Trump supporters stormed the U.S. Capitol in an attempt to stop the certification of Biden's victory.

The mob was incited by Trump himself, who told them to "fight like hell" to save their country. They broke into the Capitol, vandalized the building, and assaulted police officers.

The attack on the Capitol was a direct assault on American democracy. It was an attempt to overturn the results of a free and fair election.

The People Who Stopped It

The attempt to overturn the 2020 election was a grave threat to American democracy. But it was also a moment of heroism and resilience, as people across the country stood up to Trump and his allies.

The people who stopped the attempt to overturn the election include:

- State officials who resisted pressure from Trump and his allies to change the outcome of the election.
- Election officials who worked tirelessly to ensure that the election was free and fair.
- Law enforcement officers who protected the Capitol from the mob on January 6th.
- Citizens who spoke out against Trump's lies and who demanded that the election results be respected.

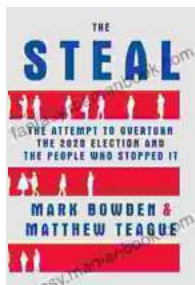

The people who stopped the attempt to overturn the 2020 election are heroes. They defended our democracy against a grave threat.

The Legacy of the Attempt

The attempt to overturn the 2020 election is a stain on American history. It was a betrayal of our democratic values and a threat to our way of life.

But the attempt to overturn the election also revealed the strength of our democracy. It showed that there are people who are willing to stand up for what they believe in and that democracy is not easily defeated.

The legacy of the attempt to overturn the 2020 election is a mixed one. It is a reminder of the fragility of our democracy, but it is also a testament to the strength of our people.
